

THE GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 23.

Tammany hall will be represented at the inauguration by 500 men. As a rule, wherever there is a feast you will find Tammany.

The Kosuth obituaries already in type will do for some other time. The old agitator is alive and well.

Misfortunes never come singly. Blaine was beaten, and now Dr. Bell, of the Buffalo scandal fame, will take the lecture field.

The Brooklyn fire with its charred human remains, is another lesson. But such lessons multiply, and where is the profit from them?

Cold weather has struck a boom, and is in full accord with Vinton's prediction. He predicted mild weather, but that meant anything but mild.

If the administration wants to scare Mormonism out of its boots, let it appoint Kate Field governor of Utah. Kate would be worth a dozen regiments.

If England would spend some of the money and energy at home that she spends in Egypt and India, she wouldn't stand trembling in fear of dynamites.

The report that Logan is broken down in spirit since the election, is not confirmed by facts. Logan has too much horse sense to let political defeat crush his spirit.

It will be good news to the admirers of Mr. Blaine to know that Mr. Devine, who reported that statesman's speeches on his western tour had failed, will publish them in book form.

Freedom hasn't got over striking since Lord Tennyson wrote about it so lavishly a month ago. Freedom and Sprague are quite sensitive when they have their names mixed up with "poetry."

About the only time "Bob" Rogers ever got floored was when he asked in thundering tones, "What minister has ever done so much for the world as Darwin?" A piping voice squeaked out, "Burchard."

Jay Gould says that 1885 will be a money-making year. Very likely for the hands that oppress and can water stocks and bull the markets. Gamblers like Gould always make money in times of depression.

Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, says the south will be for protection before another year. When the south will be for an honest vote and a fair count, we may have courage to believe that she will be for protection.

This is an unfortunate time of the year. Fires, railway accidents, loss of life by the intense cold, drowning while skating on unsafe ice, blizzards, and the attempt to write poetry on the bit—surround themselves into one season.

If the government intends to engage in farming or in running a dairy, then the department of agriculture bill should become a law. Otherwise it should not. The government has no more time to farm than it has to run railways.

The republican senators have virtually agreed not to hamper President Cleveland after the 4th of March. The president and the senate will come to some understanding so that there will be no fear of feeling down in Washington.

Senator Bayard has come to the conclusion that Cleveland's administration can't succeed with half democrats and half republicans holding office. Very likely Mr. Cleveland will be induced to thank as Mr. Bayard does.

It is formally announced that Mr. Everts will be a candidate for the senatorship in New York. It would be an honor to the senate, a credit to New York, a recognition of brains, and a complement to integrity, to put Mr. Everts in the senate of the United States.

The New York presidents are thus accounted for by the St. Louis Globe Democrat: "New York has furnished four presidents—Van Buren, Fillmore, Arthur and Cleveland—one in a direct way, two by succession, and the other by alteration."

There is a singular co-partnership in the ownership of the New Orleans Free Press, the well known democratic paper. It is owned by wife and husband—Nichols and Co., the company being the husband. The names of the proprietors read on the paper—"Mrs. E. J. Nicholson, George Nicholson, Mrs. Nicholson is one of the editors."

There are about 50,000,000 cigars annually imported from Cuba into the United States. It is charged that if the Spanish-American treaty is ratified, the market of this country will be flooded with a low grade of Cuban cigars. Of the 8,000,000,000 cigars manufactured annually in this country 500,000,000 are fine and not equal to, but in many cases superior to, the Cuban imports. There are 500,000 people employed in the industry.

John G. Whittier was 77 years old on the 17th instant, and the pupils of the Junior class of the Girl's high school of Boston, sent him seventy-seven choice roses in honor of the day. In reply he returned the following lines:

The sun of life is sinking low,
Without a winter's falling snow;
Within your summer's heart I feel
The heart of age you offering cheer.
You count in flowers my many years,
God bless you, one and all.
Mr. Whittier is not in good health, and the chances are that his days are well-nigh numbered. His life is full of years and his years are full of honor.

Miss Ida Lawson was left an orphan in California last year and determined to return to return to her old home in Green Bay, and take her scanty possessions with her; so six months since she set out on horseback from San Francisco with only a sheepskin for a saddle and followed by a yearling colt and a dog. In this manner she pursued her homeward way over mountains and prairie, undaunted by peril and hardship. She arrived at Green Bay last week.

COMPLIMENTING CLEVELAND
Last week, the Hon. Andrew Shuman, editor of the Chicago Journal, visited the east, and while in New York he ran up to Albany to catch a glimpse of the president-elect. He had a conversation with him, and as the saying goes, he sounded him on his proposed policy. It appears that Mr. Shuman was quite favorably struck with Mr. Cleveland, and believes that he is a man of good intentions, and will endeavor, to the utmost, to be worthy of the place to which the American people have elevated him. Among other things he says of Cleveland:

He is inspired by better motives than the party that nominated him for the presidency. He looks and talks like a thorough, honest, and true American patriot, and I shall expect that he will prove to be when he gets to Washington. I do not believe him capable of reckless partisanship. No one can talk to him for ten minutes without being thus impressed. The question is, however, will he have the nerve—the courage—to resist the wiles and pressures of the bad elements of his party when he assumes the reins of government? He has the appearance of a brave, self-mannered, and self-reliant man, and the people of Albany of both parties assure me that he is precisely that style of man; that he has demonstrated that fact in the gubernatorial office, and that he will demonstrate it even more convincingly at Washington.

If Mr. Cleveland shall prove to be the man Governor Shuman thinks he is already, every American, who feels a patriotic pride for his country, will have occasion to give thanks. What the people want is good government. They want a wise and conservative congress, and a president who can honor the office. Both parties can point with pride to such an administration as this.

MORE FAITH CURES.

There comes from Ohio another case of a faith cure. A man who had spent many months in bed and who could find no relief in medicine, has been quickly restored to health by faith and the simple bread pill. Last year there was many extraordinary faith cures reported in this country. Some of the patients had been confined to their beds for years and physicians had abandoned them because they were considered hopeless.

But these remarkable cures are neither new nor rare. Long before the beginning of the Christian era they existed, and are with us to-day. It is not difficult to account for faith cures. Every physician knows that disease is often a mere fancy of the brain; and every practitioner of medicine understands the great influence of the mind over disease of the body. The medical history of this and every other country, is full of cases where persons have been carried to the grave with no other bodily ailment than a diseased mind. One of the most important things in the practice of medicine, is for the physician to secure the entire confidence of the patient. When this is done, half the battle is gained in contending with the disease or with mind that fancies that disease is in the body.

It is very evident that the latest example of faith cure, Mr. Bolton, was unable to help himself because he had lost all hope and had abandoned himself to total disappointment. He had lost faith in his physician, but when another was secured who determined to use more tact than medicine, who could smile and indulge in a pleasant joke, and give the diseased mind some cheer and brightness instead of discouragement and gloom; then Mr. Bolton began to improve, and in a month was himself again. Such cures are not miracles, by any means; they are susceptible of logical explanation as the daily experience of almost every physician will prove.

LET IT GO.

Some of the democrats will wage opposition to the bill which provides for the suspension of the silver dollar coinage; and there are a few republicans who say, "let the coinage go on." But common sense and a decent regard for the necessities of business say, "let the silver dollar go."

Ever since 1878, not less than two millions of the standard silver dollars have been coined every month. The law provides that there shall not be less than two millions a month and no more than four millions; so the republican secretaries of the treasury have wisely held to minimum. A greater number of these dollars should not be coined than are necessary for the business of the country. But what are the facts in the case? Instead of coming dollars to meet an actual demand for currency, 28,000,000 of the silver dollars are coined each year without regard to the necessities of business. There are very nearly 150,000,000 silver dollars stored in the government vaults, while the silver certificates issued against them are but $107,000,000. While, therefore, what is equivalent to nearly two years' coinage of these dollars refuse to circulate in any form, it is manifest folly and extravagance to go on adding to the pile.

But there is another reason why the blind coinage law should be repealed. It is a fact that two currencies, which are widely different as to their value, can not circulate side by side without considerable damage being done to the better coin. The worse has the advantage over the better. If the standard silver dollar keeps on coming from the mint, and the supply of gold gets so low that the government will be compelled to pay out silver dollars on a large scale, the premium on gold will soon appear, and then what condition would our country be in? Can the friends of unlimited coinage answer this question?

The only wise thing to do is to stop filling up the treasury with silver dollars. The country does not need them, so let them go.

THE NEW ENGLAND SOCIETY.

Its Annual Anniversary—Gen. Sherman the Leading Speaker.
New York, Dec. 23.—The New England Society of New York celebrated its 78th anniversary Monday evening by a banquet at Delmonico's. Covers were laid for 250 and the banquet hall was, as on former occasions, elaborately decorated with flags, laurel flowers and rare plants. Ex-Lieutenant Governor Stewart L. Woodford presided. Among the distinguished guests present were Gov. W. C. Sherman, ex-Governor Louis of Massachusetts; Hugh Cabot Lodge, Chauncey M. Depew, Gen. Horace Porter, Frederick R. Coudert, Daniel F. Appleton, Josiah M. Fiske, Marville W. Cooper, Hon. Calvin E. Pratt, J. Pierpont Morgan, William L. Strong, Louis Tilden, and James J. Goodwin. After the cloth had been removed President Woodford made a brief address. The regular toasts of the evening were then in order.

Gov. Sherman, on rising to respond to the toast of "Our Country," was received with great cheering. The general said that he was present to keep a promise made some time ago to Gen. Grant and Sheridan, and although the two distinguished generals were unable to be present, he Sherman had kept his word. The country, continued the general, can be viewed in a great many aspects. Starting from New England to the lakes, and thence to the rivers of the north, and on to the Rocky mountains to the Pacific coast, two-thirds of this vast continent had been redeemed as from a desert to as it was now—now a productive land. In the opinion of the speaker, 1863 was the year that the country really became independent. The war of 1812 was merely a side issue, in which England and France wanted to use us. The general next referred to the civil war, and said the people of the south did not want civil war; they were imposed upon by their leaders in Washington, and if there ever was a conspiracy that was one of the most damnable conspiracies ever perpetrated, but as the war progressed it gave the country law and freedom to every one. They had fought with foreign enemies, they had fought with themselves, and in each case they had been victorious, and now they could truly sing, "Our Country 'tis of Thee." The other toasts responded to were: "Fathers' Day," Ex-Governor Long; "The State of New York," Chauncey M. Depew; "The Independent Spirit of New England," Henry C. Lodge; "The City of New York," R. Coudert; "Our Country," Gen. H. Porter; "The President of the United States," was drunk standing.

Cooked Their Own Omelette.

New York, Dec. 23.—Rigola, the San's Wall street man, after stating that the stock gamblers on the street have been skinning outsiders for so many years that the aldermen and equities have got tired of the game, and will not play with them, said there was no chance for anybody but the man who manipulates the cards, adds: "It is probably safe to predict that neither gambling nor legitimate speculation will receive in this country for a considerable time to come, and as long as there is no change in the general situation there can be no improvement in Wall street business, never mind what the Yankees, the Vandebils, or the Westinghouses may do. They can scalp and squeeze party board room speculators, but they can neither make money by it nor attract the investing public into the game. The best proof of it is that W. H. Vanderbilt, with all his showings and unscrupulousness, is to-day probably worth $50,000,000 less than he was three years ago."

No More Bodies Found.

New York, Dec. 23.—The ruins of the laundry and infirmary of the St. John's Orphan asylum, which had been removed, and no more bodies have been found. The children who are still reported missing are doubtless quartered in various private houses throughout the city, or at the homes of relatives, who have neglected to report the fact to the proper authorities. The list of the supposed dead is as follows: James McCarren, aged 7; John McCarren, aged 7; W. Davis, aged 10; John Clark, aged 6; Daniel Connors, aged 7; Joseph Connors, aged 7; Charles Dougherty, aged 13; Frank Dougherty, aged 5; William Donahue, aged 10; John Donahue, aged 5; John Fitzsimmons, aged 7; Edward Ford, aged 6; Patrick Golden, aged 7; John Horan, aged 6; Thomas Lohy, aged 6; William O'Brien, aged 6; Thomas Riley, aged 12; Edward Riley, aged 8.

The Fire Flood.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 23.—The furniture factory of Graham & Schmidt on South Carolina street, was partially destroyed by fire Monday evening. Loss $35,000; insurance $24,000.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 23.—Shortly after the workmen quit work at the Union Oil company's building, Neptune avenue and Newark bay, Monday night, one of the small tanks exploded, setting fire to the building. The damage to building and works was $34,000; insurance not known.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Fire Monday night in the building 123 and 125 Fifth avenue occupied by Albert Stern, dealer in notions and fancy goods, and Schraeder & Schraeder, paint-makers, caused a loss of $82,000; fully insured.

The Storey Estate.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—The controversy over the arrangement of the estate of the late Wilbur P. Storey was renewed Monday morning before Judge Knickerbocker in the probate court in the shape of a motion to probate the document of Aug. 15, 1876, alleged to be the will of Wilbur P. Storey. Mrs. Eureka Storey presented a petition praying that the will be admitted to probate. After hearing the arguments Judge Knickerbocker denied the prayer of the petition; also stating his reasons for refusing to admit the 1881 will to probate.

A Disease that Puzzles the Doctors.
OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 23.—The medical meeting in the county of Annapolis, Nova Scotia, are somewhat puzzled over the prevalence of a disease which, so far, they have been unable to define. It is of a mixed epidemic character and has become almost epidemic about the neighborhood. It is regarded as more contagious than infectious, although the marked symptoms are typhoid. It affects all ages and conditions.

A Bad One in Illinois.

OTTAWA, Ill., Dec. 23.—O. J. and William Wilson, whose bank at Earlville closed last Friday, filed an assignment for the benefit of their creditors. They put their total assets at $60,000, and their total liabilities at $107,000. Their failure is a bad one, as it will distress many farmers and poor people who left their small savings there.

Mississippi Failures.

New York, Dec. 23.—The Scranton bank of Scranton, Miss., and E. Krebs & Son, general store, at the same place, have made assignments. The Scranton bank was a private institution, started in July, 1883, by Paul J. Sarrazin, of New Orleans, and was managed by H. F. Krebs, the Swedish vice consul.
